Reason For Policy

The implementation of the Affordable Care Act (ACA) requires Indiana University to clarify several of its policies regarding the appointment of academic employees. Unlike some other federal employment regulations, the ACA does not include special exemptions for academic or student employees. As a result, the university is in the position of fitting general employment requirements to the special setting of academic employment. To avoid financial penalties and increases in healthcare program expense (which already exceeds $223 million in the coming fiscal year), the University is adopting these interim policies.
